	Reasonable accommodation ensures equal opportunity in the examination, application, and hiring process that will enable a qualified applicant or employee with a disability to participate in those processes and perform the essential functions of the job. There are different types of reasonable accommodation requests, and each request is unique and must be evaluated on an individual basis. Reasonable accommodation enables applicants and employees with a disability to participate in state civil service and enjoy equal benefits, privileges, and full access to the workplace. Examples of Reasonable Accommodations <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Make existing facilities used by applicants and employees readily accessible to and usable by individuals with disabilities. PROCEDURE:	Accommodation Requests Job applicants with a disability have the right to request a reasonable accommodation for the examination, application, and interview process. State employees with disabilities have the right to request reasonable accommodation for a modification or an adjustment to the job, work environment, or in the way things are customarily done. A reasonable accommodation request may be made verbally or in writing using Request for Reasonable Accommodations – ADM-260. The applicant or employee need not use the term “reasonable accommodation” to signal a reasonable accommodation request. If the applicant or employee wishes, a third party (such as a family member, health care professional, or other representative) may make a reasonable accommodation request on behalf of an applicant or employee. A third party may participate with the employee in the interactive process. Interactive Process The Commission shall initiate an “interactive process” when an applicant or employee requests reasonable accommodations. The Commission shall also offer to initiate an interactive process when/if we become aware of the possible need for an accommodation. This awareness might come through a third party, by observation, or because the employee has exhausted leave benefits but still needs reasonable accommodation.

The interactive process is the series of communications between the employee or applicant and the Reasonable Accommodation Coordinator regarding the employee or applicant's limitations, the need for accommodation, the expected date the accommodation will be provided, or the reason why the request is denied.

Examples of circumstances prompting an employer to engage in the interactive process:

- A job applicant with a disability requests a reasonable accommodation for an examination or job interview.
- An employee with a disability requests a reasonable accommodation that will enable the individual to perform the essential functions of the position or enjoy equal opportunities and benefits.
- An employee returns to work after an illness or injury and needs reasonable accommodation.
- An employee returns to work after an extended leave such as California Family Rights Act (CFRA), Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA), or approved reasonable accommodation leave.
- An employee's disability has changed, and the need arises to modify an existing accommodation.
- An existing accommodation no longer appears to be effective.
- An employee cannot fully access or understand training materials or the examination process due to a limitation related to a disability.

Medical Certification

The Commission may request certification from a qualified health care provider, verifying that an accommodation is necessary when the applicant's or employee's disability or need for accommodation is not apparent or known to the employer. It is the applicant's or employee's responsibility to provide appropriate medical information related to the limitations and the requested accommodation.

The Commission will provide a copy of the employee's duty statement to share with their health care provider. The medical certification shall address, in writing, the following:

- Verify the employee has a disability (not the diagnosis).
- Describe how the employee's limitations interfere with their ability to perform the duties of the job.
- Indicate whether these limitations are temporary or permanent. If temporary, state the anticipated start and end date of the limitations.
- Recommend specific reasonable accommodation(s).

The Commission can request additional relevant medical information if the information submitted does not clearly explain the limitations or the need for the accommodation. The health care provider should clarify how the requested accommodation will assist the employee in performing the essential functions of the job, access the workplace, or enjoy the benefits and privileges of employment.

Reasonable Accommodation Analysis

The reasonable accommodation process requires an individualized assessment of both the job and the specific physical or mental limitations of the individual that are directly related to the need for reasonable accommodation.

The Commission must consider the applicant or employee's preferred accommodation request but may provide alternate reasonable accommodations if they are effective for the applicant or employee.

A reasonable accommodation need not be the highest quality, the most expensive, or the specific accommodation requested, if it achieves the desired result, which is to enable the employee to perform the essential functions of the job. Where two or more possible accommodations are reasonable, the agency will determine which accommodation is offered based upon business reasons.

Reasonable Accommodation Request Denial

Undue hardship and direct threat are the only legitimate reasons for denying a reasonable accommodation request from a qualified applicant or employee with a disability.

Undue Hardship

Undue hardship includes any action that is unduly costly, substantial, disruptive, or that would fundamentally alter the nature of operations. Factors that must be considered in determining undue hardship include:

- Overall size of the agency with respect to the number of employees, number and types of facilities, and the size of the overall budget.
- Type of operation, including the composition, structure, and functions of the agency's workforce.
- Nature and cost of the accommodation.

Direct Threat

Direct threat is a significant risk of substantial harm to the health or safety of the individual or others that cannot be eliminated or reduced by reasonable accommodation. The determination that an individual poses a direct threat shall be based on a case-by-case assessment of the individual's present ability to safely perform the essential functions of the job. This assessment shall be based on a reasonable medical judgment that relies on the most current medical knowledge and/or on the best available objective evidence. In determining a direct threat, the factors to consider include:

- Duration of the risk.
- Nature and severity of the potential harm.
- Likelihood that the potential harm will occur.
- Imminence of the potential harm.
- Any relevant information about an employee's past work history.

Complaint/Appeal

Applicants and employees may file a discrimination complaint with the Commission's EEO Office regarding a denial of reasonable accommodation. Applicants and employees may also file a complaint with the State Personnel Board \(SPB\), California Civil Rights Department \(CRD\), and with the United

	States Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) regarding denial of reasonable accommodation. The SPB, CRD, and EEOC have different statutes of limitations and it is the applicant's or employee's responsibility to file the complaint within the regulatory agency's respective timeframes. Harassment, Discrimination, and Retaliation Prohibition The Commission shall prohibit and promptly address harassment, discrimination, and retaliation toward or from participants in the reasonable accommodation process.

The electronic versions of the policy and related materials shall be accessible to and useable by persons with disabilities.
